

How to upskill to boost your career and pay packet

A warehouse workers quick guide

Knowledge, skills and experience are the things that set some warehouse workers apart from the rest.

By taking the initiative and investing in your skills you place yourself into this elite group of individuals who are enjoying a higher pay rate and who are destined for promotion, so give yourself an edge over other workers and applicants and provide yourself with the very best opportunity to progress in your career

Give yourself a lift

One of the most useful and highly prized skills a Warehouse Operative can have is the ability to drive a counterbalance or reach forklift.

Increased pay packet between £8.23ph to £11.20ph (£16,642 - £25,204 per year) which is higher than the pay bracket for a standard warehouse operative role.

Computer Skills

If you are looking to progress in your warehouse career as a team leader, supervisor, stock controller or in a managerial position you will be required to use computer programs. Enrol on an IT skills course to ensure you have what it takes when the opportunity arises.

www.Vision2learn.net provides a range of fully funded, nationally accredited e-learning courses including a Level 2 Certificate in IT User Skills.

The Full Package

Studying a full NVQ Qualification in Warehouse and Storage can lead to a variety of roles including supervisory positions, stock control, and management roles. There are three levels to the NVQ, you would enter at the level that best suits your current position.

Level 1

secure some basic knowledge as well as a recognised qualification.

Level 2

add some machinery handling to your skillset and gain a recognised qualification.

Level 3

Team leaders build some skills in the areas of staff and systems management and optimisation. This is a nationally recognised qualification.

For more Warehouse work advice, go to:

 bluearrow.co.uk/communities/warehouse

www.bluearrow.co.uk

blueArrow